

Principles of safe coexistence

At the meetings organized by EHPV, safety rules are in place.

Principles of unity: A safe space is one where we respect everyone, regardless of their gender and its expression, age, potential disability, nationality, race, skin color, religion or beliefs, sexual orientation, or other characteristics.

Physical safety:

Everyone has the right to bodily boundaries, and others must respect them. This means that when we engage in physical contact, we rely on the verbal or non-verbal consent of the other person. Any physical assault or harassment is not allowed. If you feel that someone is crossing your boundaries, please report it. The use of hateful symbols to attack others is also unacceptable.

Mental safety:

In addition to physical safety, we also pay attention to mental safety. To ensure this, it is important that everyone refrains from:

- Using derogatory stereotypes
- Objectifying people. Every individual has the right to individuality and bodily autonomy.
- Gender-based or sexual harassment, including verbal, physical, or the use of gestures
- Patronizing, threatening, and/or accusatory statements

If you encounter derogatory or unequal treatment, please report it via our website or email:
